What Can Your Center Do for You?

The UW ALACRITY Center was awarded by the NIMH to serve as an "incubator" of novel research. We offer an array of supports unique to our interdisciplinary team. In turn, R03 awardees are expected to contribute to overall Center aims and functions. This formalized approach will help with the Center's success towards sustainability.

RedCap data collection tools	All suggested ALACRITY measures (see data management document) are already built and can be shared via RedCap. Other project-specific RedCap tools can be built for you by request.	Streamline data collection and storage; contribute to Center products	Jed Jacobson (jacobjed@uw.edu) and Mike Pullmann (pullmann@uw.edu)
Methods consultation	The ALACRITY Methods Core team is available to consult with you around user focused data collection strategies, tools, and analyses.	Maximize efficiency and collect data best suited to your study	Your Methods Core Mentor can direct you to the appropriate team member
Mentorship on implementation science	The Methods Core team has subject matter experts who are available to consult with questions on implementation science.	Understand implementation determinants, strategies, outcomes, and methodology	Aaron Lyon (lyona@uw.edu)
Design consultation	The ALACRITY center has a UX design team who can consult on any tools you are creating for your project.	Ensure the most functional, appealing, and usable designs	Emily Friedman (emily212@uw.edu)
Grant writing support	Drs. Areán and Pullmann will co-lead a grant-writing boot camp, held three months before each NIH deadline, to review proposals, assist in describing the DDBT methods used to create the innovations in EBPI usability and EBPI implementation	Improve your chances of converting your R03 into fundable extramural proposals	We will contact each R03 cohort at the appropriate time.
